The past year gave us a return to a sense of normalcy. While there may have been uncertainty in other parts of our lives, parks, trails, recreation centers, and other amenities remained a constant – providing a respite and haven.

The Dallas Park and Recreation Department earned national reaccreditation in the field of parks and recreation through the Commission for Accreditation of Parks and Recreation Agencies (CAPRA) and National Recreation and Park Association (NRPA). Reaccreditation requires meeting 154 rigorous standards related to the management and administration of lands, facilities, resources, programs, safety and services; fewer than two percent of park departments nationwide receive this prestigious accreditation, so it further proves the commitment to our natural assets and to the citizens who use them.

Many thanks to the Dallas City Council for restoring funding for capital projects operations and maintenance, security, partner agencies, and Wi-Fi in more locations. The Park Board unequivocally believes parks and recreation centers should be gathering places in a connected world and will keep advocating for additional investment.

Message from Dallas Park and Recreation Director

The global pandemic continued to create unanticipated challenges. Through the uncertainties, we moved forward with implementing new programs, construction projects and popular recreational activities. Dallas Park and Recreation continued to care for our communities, demonstrating that parks and recreation professionals and programs are adaptable despite limitations imposed by this social and health crisis.

As a forward-thinking organization, we established strategic priorities that served as our roadmap in enhancing parks, delivering inclusive and equitable recreation to communities, and strengthening our alliances with nonprofits. We made great strides in affirming our pledge to provide inclusive and equitable parks and recreation services for everyone.

The American Academy for Park and Recreation Administration and National Recreation and Park Association recognized the department’s commitment to organizational excellence. They named Dallas as a finalist for the 2020 National Gold Medal Awards for Excellence in Park and Recreation Management. This is a tremendous accomplishment for the citizens of Dallas. We are beaming on our accomplishment and we will continue to grow and build on this foundation.

No doubt the year’s events changed the course of the park and recreation industry and our lives. Yet, Dallas Park and Recreation remained steadfast as we continued providing families and communities with quality parks and recreation programs.

DEPARTMENT HIGHLIGHTS

Dallas named a finalist for 2020 National Gold Medal Award

The American Academy for Park and Recreation Administration (AAPRA) and the National Recreation and Park Association (NRPA) named Dallas Park and Recreation as a finalist for the 2020 National Gold Medal Award for Excellence in Park and Recreation Management. This prestigious honor denotes excellence in the park and recreation industry. It has been 35 years since Dallas was a finalist for the Grand Plaque Gold Medal that recognizes the best of the best public park and recreation programs throughout the country.

National park and recreation award honors Dallas and nonprofit partner for work to reduce disparities among Dallas seniors

Daryl Quarles, Dallas Park and Recreation Department senior program manager, and Carol Zernial, WellMed Charitable Foundation (WCF) executive director, were recipients of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF)-NRPA Award for Health Equity given by the National Recreation and Park Association (NRPA). A partnership between the department and the foundation led to the WCF providing a $150,000 grant to the City of Dallas. The donation helped underwrite annual and monthly fees for residents 60 and older who participate in recreation center activities. Their collaboration led to the opening of the WellMed Charitable Foundation Senior Activity Center, the department’s largest recreation center offering wellness and recreational programs exclusively for seniors.

Dallas gets Bird City Texas designation

The department’s approach to urban wildlife management, habitat restoration, and bird conservation earned it statewide recognition as a Bird City community by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and Audubon Texas. The designation honors Dallas’ bird conservation, greenspace management and community engagement efforts.

Park projects win Preservation Dallas Awards

Preservation Dallas announced its 21st annual Preservation Achievement Awards and two park and recreation projects were winners: Samuell-Grand Regional Family Aquatics Center and the Sharrock-Niblo Barn.

The construction of the new aquatic center at Samuell-Grand Park preserved the original community pool building, incorporating it into the new facility’s design. Restoration of the Sharrock-Niblo Barn is under way at the historic homestead that is the proposed site for a new city park.

Texas Recreation and Parks Society recognizes Dallas Park and Recreation

Texas Recreation and Parks Society (TRAPS) North Region recognized Dallas Park and Recreation for excellence in leisure programs, facility design, and marketing.

The department received the Promotional Award for its Play It Safe in Dallas Parks social distancing campaign; the Lone Star Programming award for Rec@Home virtual recreation; and the Recreation Facility Design Excellence Award for the city’s aquatic centers and spraygrounds.

DFW Directors Association honors inclusion training and urban biologist

The DFW Directors Association presented its Inclusion Award to park employees whose in-house awareness training focused on engaging and providing support for individuals with disabilities, underserved teens, minorities, and other special needs populations. In addition, park biologist Brett Johnson received the group’s Environmental Stewardship award for his conservation activities.

The City Nature Challenge

Park Maintenance and Operations joined Texas Parks and Wildlife Department and Parks for Pollinators to plan the City Nature Challenge to encourage more citizen participation in local BioBlitz events. City Nature attracted 382 observers who made 2,371 research grade observations of 687 flora species. The National Recreation and Park Association Parks for Pollinators BioBlitz resulted in 4,062 observations with 382 people participating and 863 pollinators observed. BioBlitz encourages anyone with a passion to protect their environment to identify local flora and fauna in parks and natural areas. Using the INaturalist app, BioBlitzers can easily identify plants, flowers, insects, trees, animals and birds. Their discoveries provide the department with useful data about Dallas parks.

Wood recycling equipment acquired

North Central Texas Council of Government grant for $200,000 helped park forestry staff purchase large-scale wood recycling equipment. The new trommel separates wood chips generated through forestry operations into clean mulch and compost for horticulture beds, resulting in cost savings on mulch purchases and landfill fees.
EQUITY AND INCLUSION

Parks, recreation programs welcome everyone

All Dallas Park and Recreation is the department’s equity plan. Developed in-house, the plan outlines methodologies to address organizational (internal) and public (external) equity-related initiatives. It includes an overall framework, core team involvement, and plan integration strategies.

Motion-operated, touch-free amenities highlight multimillion dollar recreation center renovations

Bachman Recreation Center reopened after two years with a modern interior and exterior. New accessible amenities include state-of-the-art motion-operated, touch-free restroom doors - first of its kind to be installed in a Dallas recreation center. Low-flow touchless fixtures address COVID-19 safety practices and conserve water. For 42 years, Bachman has offered inclusive and adaptive leisure activities for individuals and families with - and without - physical and cognitive disabilities.
NEIGHBORHOOD AND COMMUNITY PARKS

In 2017, Dallas residents voted for a $312 million bond program to support its growing and vibrant park system. New parks, improved trails, updated facilities, and modern construction projects created new leisure options for all ages. An additional match funding totaling $159 million was pledged by supporting organizations and agencies.

Former shopping center parking lot transformed into new green space

Dallas celebrated the opening of its most uniquely constructed green space. Once a strip mall parking lot, the one and a half-acre Hillcrest Village Green Park is the eye-catching centerpiece surrounded now by new and revitalized retail stores and upscale restaurants. Hillcrest Village Green is the result of a successful public-private partnership that is credited with renewing a vital area of north Dallas.

Danieldale and Willoughby parks welcome new playgrounds

Danieldale and Willoughby parks welcomed new playgrounds. Featuring the latest playground designs, the accessible play areas gave ages two to 12 lots of room to run, jump, swing, and climb. A National Recreation and Park Association grant helped fund a portion of the Danieldale project.
Dallas park goes to the dogs
East Dallas canines had lots to bark about when they joined city officials at the groundbreaking for a new off-leash playground at Crockett Park.

Park Rangers share expertise with youth campers
The department’s Park Rangers shared what it’s like to be an urban park ranger with summer youth participants at 25 recreation centers and Samuell-Farm. During their visits, Rangers engaged youth with interactive classes in water conservation, recycling, animal habitats, and Dallas parks history and trivia.
With 180 urban trail miles and 45 miles under construction, Dallas’ trail network consists of linear, loop and soft surface trails that offer diverse recreational options. In addition, trails provide alternative transportation modes throughout the city and promote healthy, active lifestyles. Trail projects completed included:

Martin Weiss Park Loop Trail
The Martin Weiss Park Loop Trail is almost 2,000 linear feet with a 10-foot-wide concrete surface and has retaining walls and safety pedestrian rails along the creek bank. A new prefabricated steel truss pedestrian bridge over the creek complete the loop.

Runyon Creek Trail Phase 2 from Singing Hills to University of North Texas Dallas Campus
This 0.8-mile linear trail connects the University of North Texas Dallas campus with Singing Hills Recreation Center, creating a much-needed link for commuter and recreational traffic.

Holcomb Park Loop Trail
The department’s Facility Services installed a new loop trail at Holcomb Park. The trail’s concrete surface is 2,300 feet long and 6 feet wide. A new parking lot was enhanced with security lighting funded with Legacy Bond monies.

Winstead Park Loop Trail
Facility Services constructed 950 feet of a six-foot-wide trail from Winstead Drive to West Lawther Drive and created a new ADA ramp at West Lawther Drive at Winstead Park.
Dallas Mayor Eric Johnson announced a new program that let Dallas teens visit some of the city’s most iconic and entertaining attractions at no cost! Dallas Park and Recreation joined with several amazing family attractions to create the Teen All-Access Pass, giving young Dallas residents a one-of-a-kind cultural experience. More than 7,066 teens and three family members participated, resulting in 14,279 free admissions at Dallas Arboretum, Dallas Holocaust and Human Rights Museum, Dallas Museum of Art, Dallas Zoo, Trinity River Audubon Center, Shakespeare Dallas, Bahama Beach, Southern Skates Roller Rink and Dallas Library. The Teen All Access Pass gained positive attention and media coverage. Youth can look forward to another summer of fun in 2022.

Dallas Park and Recreation Department earned national accreditation in the field of parks and recreation through the Commission for Accreditation of Parks and Recreation Agencies (CAPRA) and National Recreation and Park Association (NRPA). The department first earned the distinction in 2016.

Accreditation signifies that the Department utilizes national best practices in all facets of the organization from recreation programs to park maintenance standards to business operations. CAPRA accreditation is the only national accreditation for park and recreation agencies and is a measure of an agency’s overall quality of operation, management and service to the community.

As part of the accreditation process, Dallas demonstrated compliance with 154 recognized standards. Less than two percent of park and recreation agencies in the country have attained accreditation.

The City of Dallas provides six beautifully maintained golf courses. Each property offers a unique golfing experience for players ranging from beginner to professional. Golfers can improve their games through professional instruction, driving ranges and practice facilities. Each course can host tournaments of all sizes and the pro shops are fully equipped to meet the customer’s growing needs.

An in-house bunker renovation completed by the department’s Facility Services team eliminated rain-created silt deposits at Tenison Park Golf Course and saved the department an estimated $75,000 in construction costs. In addition, maintenance costs at the golf course dropped from $45,783 in 2020 to $34,337 in 2021.

Dallas Park and Recreation has four full-service tennis centers with 83 tennis courts. Each center is open daily and offers lighted courts, professional instruction, league and tournament play, retail and concession sales, and equipment and repair services. With the rising popularity of pickleball, some tennis centers are now equipped with pickleball-lined courts and dedicated courts for play.
After a two-year expansion project, Bahama Beach reopened with a new look that features a 4,000-square-foot lagoon pool with two waterfalls with four underwater benches and a children’s sprayground. The colorful 42-foot Boomerango slide lets multiple riders make waves. Aquatic centers at Harry Stone and Exline parks gave families other ways to escape the heat. The new water play areas feature kids’ pools with spray toys, lap pools with climbing walls, and pool slides.

Teach a Child To Swim Program awards scholarships

Dallas Aquatics helped 3,290 youth and adults master basic to advanced swimming skills, conducted 562 swim lessons and awarded 404 scholarships. The annual Teach a Child to Swim campaign netted $32,796, providing 163 scholarships valued at $6,750. In addition, the Kidd Springs Park Brick Paver Donor program gave scholarships valued at more than $6,400 to 156 individuals.
Adventure camp lets urban youth experience the great outdoors

Samuell Farm – 609 acres sitting in a rustic, natural setting – was the site for the first-ever Adventure Camp hosted by the award-winning Outdoor Adventures team. More than 225 youth ages 7 to 15 signed up for the nine-week summer camp that introduced them to mountain biking, kayaking, archery, fishing and survival skills.

Teen Recreation returned

Teen Recreation (TRec) programs resumed at 14 recreation centers, giving 2,564 youth ages 13 to 17 fun and educational learning options with sports, leisure games, performing and visual arts, technology, fitness, and more.
PARTNERSHIPS

“Dallas Park and Recreation leverages over $75 million in partnership funding annually to supplement the department’s approximate $100 million budget.”

Long-term partnerships with national and area nonprofits, civic groups, corporations, businesses, and youth-serving organizations are vibrant connections that result in diversified leisure programs and facilities, giving families more leisure options. These public-private collaborations have expanded Dallas’ park system with new recreation initiatives, parks, trails and green spaces.

With construction under way during the peak of the pandemic, West End Square opened to accolades from parkgoers. Billed as a “smart” park, West End Square features a 50-foot table with charging stations, Wi-Fi and hi-tech maintenance amenities. A partnership with the nonprofit Parks for Downtown Dallas is creating a collection of four urban green spaces that represent the largest investment in downtown parks in the nation. With West End Square and Pacific Plaza open, construction of the remaining parks is expected to be completed by 2023.

Recreation centers joined with the University of North Texas at Dallas to give residents living in food deserts fresh fruits and veggies from the college’s mobile farmers’ market. The market-on-wheels traveled to communities throughout Dallas, making regular stops at Kiest Park, Beckley-Saner, and Singing Hills recreation centers.

Staff earn professional certifications
The number of certified park and recreation professionals continued to increase as more employees decided to seek national credentials in their fields of expertise.

Currently, Dallas has 24 Certified Park and Recreation Professionals (CPRP) and one Certified Park and Recreation Executive (CPRE), distinctions awarded by the National Recreation and Park Association (NRPA). Twenty-four other employees are nationally certified in the following fields: Therapeutic Recreation, Wildlife Biology, Arboriculture, Turfgrass Management, Architecture, Landscape Architecture and Engineering.

Dallas Park and Recreation’s forester organizes first Plant Healthcare Field Day
The department’s forester organized the first-ever Plant Healthcare Field Day at Flagpole Hill for certified arborists. More than 60 area arborists attended and took part in advanced training and demonstrations on air excavations and trunk and deep-root injections.

Virtual conference offers learning options
Though the National Recreation and Park Association’s annual training conference was virtual, NRPA-certified staff viewed the virtual sessions to earn required CEU’s at no cost to the department, saving $500 in registration fees.
